Mitchell Hogmire of Bangor was a Paw Paw visitor last Monday.

All fans went to Kalamazoo to witness the ball game.

The Soldiers' Relief commission met at the county treasurer's office Monday to settle the business for the past year. They have expended during the year $969.15. Rev. I. P. Bates, who has acted as chairman for the past 24 years, had the honor of being re-elected for a term of three years. The other members of the committee are Wm. Bennett of Hartford and James Martin of South Haven.

The charity bridge party held at the home of Mrs. Will Payne last Friday afternoon was a great success in every way. About 40 ladies were present and spent an enjoyable afternoon at this favorite pastime. Mrs. Frank Miller was the fortunate winner of the head prize. Dainty refreshments were served by the members of the Sewing club and the small sum of $25 was raised by the club, who had the day in charge, to be used for charity.

Grant McFarlin and Fred Latahaw came home from Allegan to spend the week end with their parents.

Mrs. W. R. Selick went to Chicago last Friday to spend several days among friends.

Mrs. M. L. Decker, who has been in the West for some little time visiting the exposition and other places of interest, returned home Friday evening.

Messdames William and Wade Killefer and Miss Ota went to Kalamazoo, Monday, to witness the ball game between St. Louis and Kalamazoo, all star team. Wade was there to play with the latter.

Mrs. Louisa Hulbert of Kalamazoo was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Sarah Brown, the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Mason Rogers, nee Helen Clapp, of Buffalo, N. Y., spent Sunday at the home of their grandmother, Mrs. Sarah Clapp. Mr. Rogers left Monday, but she remained for a week's visit among relatives and friends.

Paw Paw has been well represented all this week at Prosperity week in Kalamazoo.

High School Notes

Douglas Hindenach, '17

Fourteen applications for membership in the high school have already been made.

Lynn Salisbury and Thomas Dow started school last week.

Harold Mumbree played Friday with the Hartford band.

Clifford Nash visited school Monday.

Ray Henderson, Wilbert Freilahn and Lewis Yorlan began school this week.

The report card system has been started in the high school this year. The card is smaller than usual and only gives the report of a half year. The list of studies are printed one side. The card folds over into a small booklet.

The ball game played at Hartford on Wednesday between Paw Paw and Hartford resulted in a score of 6 to 5 in favor of Hartford. Up to the last inning the score stood 5 to 3 in favor of Paw Paw, when a Hartford man reached third and scored a hit, while in the same inning with a man on second and third and two out, the Hartford pitcher hit the ball for two bases. This scored the men on second and third and ended the game. This showed much improvement over the last game played here. It was very noticeable that the players hit and fielded much better.

GIBSON, THE DWARF.

This Seventeenth Century Midget Won Fame as an Artist.

Purveyors of side show amusements are agreed, it is said, that dwarfs no longer may be counted upon to draw audiences, no matter how gifted these Lilliputians may be. In Charles Stratton, known the world over by his pseudonym of Tom Thumb, this country furnished the most attractive dwarf that ever exploited his accomplishments and who, as stated by his sponsor in what was considered the most "stunning" advertising of the day, was "the delight of all the crowned heads of Europe" as well as of the uncrowned sovereigns of America.

Great as Tom Thumb was in his time, there were dwarfs preceding him that made most enviable reputations. Among these were Richard Gibson, age seventy-five at his death, July 23, 1690, and his widow, who died nineteen years later at the advanced age of eighty-nine. Gibson was a miniature painter—miniature in every sense of the phrase—as well as court dwarf to Charles I. of England, and his wife, Ann Shepherd, was court dwarf to Queen Henrietta Maria. Her majesty prompted a marriage between these two clever but diminutive persons, and the marriage proved a happy one. The little couple had nine children, five of whom lived to years of maturity and were of ordinary stature.

Gibson's works were valued, and one of them was the innocent cause of a tragical event. This painting represented the parable of the lost sheep and was highly prized by the king, who gave it in charge of Vandervoort, the keeper of the royal pictures. One day the king asked for this picture. Afraid or ashamed to say that he mislaid it, Vandervoort committed suicide by hanging. A few days after his death the picture was found in the spot where he had placed it. Gibson and his wife have, however, excelled in brevity of stature, as the united height of the two was about seven feet.—Indianapolis News.

MEANING AND SAYING.

Lines of Good Writers That Mangle the Laws of Grammar.

The late and delightful Professor Tom Lounsbury of Yale always maintained that usage made language and his contempt for critics who were strict constructionists was far from concealed; he rather rejoiced in it. Presumably, therefore, he would say that a couple of sentences, which we are about to quote, were all right. They are justified by his standard—they convey to the reader the idea the writer had in mind. For what else is an article written?

Here are the cases, accidentally happened upon in casual reading. Arthur Christopher Benson in his series of essays on "Fear," writing of Sam Johnson, says, "No biographer likes, and seldom dares to," etc. Now you know what he means, but what he says is that "no biographer seldom dares," and, untying the negative, this means that a biographer usually dares, and that is exactly what Mr. Benson didn't mean.

The other quotation is from George A. Birmingham's clever travel sketch, "From Dublin to Chicago." In this, telling of the slowness with which so many American hotels and restaurants fill the order for meals, he says the guest could smoke a cigarette "between each course." There, too, the reader knows what is meant, but in fact you can't get "between each" It must be between each and something else. Can you get between a stone wall or between noon, or between 98 in the shade, or, indeed, between the soup? What he should have said to complete his English was "between each course and the next."

In both instances every reader knew what the writer intended to convey. Would the professor have pronounced these breaks justifiable? They are far from being exceptional. You can find them in the standard authors.—Hartford Courant.

The best materials for good paint, used and approved by best painters, are lead, zinc, linseed oil, with color and turpentine dryer.

There is no other way to make best paint; and we make Devoe Lead and Zinc Paint that way. It offers this advantage over any hand mixed paint; the machine grinding and mixing makes it cover better and last longer.

Specify Devoe in all paint-things you require.

Making It Strong.
Bacon—I'm building an icebox.
Egbert—Oh, are you?
"Yes. What do they put in an icebox to make it strong?"
"Onions, I believe."—Yonkers Statesman.

HOARDING WEALTH.
Could I climb to the highest place in Athens I would lift my voice and proclaim: Fellow citizens, why do ye turn and scrape every stone to gather wealth and take so little care of your children, to whom one day you must relinquish it all?—Socrates.

Dante's Fierce Retort.
The secret of Dante's struggle through life was in the reckless sarcasm of his answer to the Prince of Verona, who asked him how he could account for the fact that in the household of princes the court fool was in greater favor than the philosopher.
"Similarity of mind," said the fierce genius, "is all the world over the source of friendship."

THREE VIRTUES.
All things are possible to him who believes. They are less difficult to him that hopes, they are more easy to him who loves and still more easy to him who perseveres in the practice of these three virtues.

The Vinegar Bible.
A copy of the "Vinegar Bible" may be seen at Newchurch church, Isle of Wight. It is a name given to an edition of the Bible published in 1717 at the Clarendon Press, Oxford. A misprint in the title of the twentieth chapter of St. Luke was made to read "Parable of the Vinegar" instead of "Parable of the Vineyard."

Franklin on Fresh Air.

Experience has convinced me of my Error. I now look upon fresh Air as a friend; I even sleep with an open Window. I am persuaded that no common Air from without is so unwholesome as the Air within a close Room, that has been often breathed and not changed. Moist Air, too, which formerly I thought pernicious, gives me no Apprehensions. You physicians have of late happily discovered that fresh and cool Air does good to Persons in the Smallpox and other Fevers. It is to be hoped that in another Century or two we may find out that it is not bad even for People in Health.—Benjamin Franklin.

Naturally.
"Where have you been?" "To the cemetery." "Any one dead?" "Sure. Every one of them."—Exchange.

Piano Strings.
Supplanting the hard, high tension strand of old, the piano wire in demand today for the highest grade instrument is tough and fibrous and of absolute uniformity, and when cut it shows a clean white steel.

The piano makers have, by actual test, been brought to see that the softer wire has the greater artistic merit. The latter vibrates so evenly throughout, when actuated by the proper degree of energy, that a true fundamental tone results, with just enough of the octave to impart brilliancy, of the fifth to impart timbre and of the third and sixth to impart richness, and will be amplified by the sounding board.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Decline in Status.
